Health and Safety Fair features free CPR awareness classes

FONTANA – Residents can learn more about the lifesaving technique known as cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) during classes scheduled at the 5th annual Fontana Health and Safety Fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, June 23, at Jack Bulik Park in Fontana. This is the first year the event has offered CPR awareness classes.

American Medical Response – a local ambulance and paramedic provider – will host two CPR awareness classes in the Fontana Teen Center at the park. The free, two-hour classes will be held at 10 a.m. and noon. Pre-registration is required as space is limited to 40 participants. Residents can register online at www.sbcounty.gov/biane.

“The goal of the Health and Safety Fair is to help people take care of themselves, and the CPR awareness courses with trained and experienced AMR personnel fit perfectly with our mission,” said Board of Supervisors Chairman Paul Biane, who started the annual event in 2003. Biane represents the City of Fontana as the County’s Second District Supervisor.

In addition to CPR awareness classes, the Fontana Health and Safety Fair will feature free child car seats, bicycle helmets, various health screenings, refreshments, entertainment and more.

Residents can call (909) 945-4297 for more information about the event.
